Office Hours: M/W 11:00-12noon

Course Description

This course explores the large-scale economic and social changes that have constituted “development,” and that have radically transformed human society. The course focuses on the historical experience of Europe and “the people without history” as well as the contemporary experience of countries in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. In the historical discussion, we explore the evolution of human society from antiquity to the modern nation-state; the transition from agrarian to industrial economic systems; and the expansion of European colonialism across the globe. In our discussion of Africa, Asia, and Latin America, we consider the legacies of colonialism for development; the ways in which countries have attempted to promote economic development and industrialization; and issues of inequality and human welfare in a globally connected world.

Course Teaching Assistants

The TAs for this course are Teke Wiggin and Bambang Trihadmojo. Teke’s office hours are Wed. 2-4pm over zoom. Please email Teke theodorewiggin2026@u.northwestern for a link to attend these virtual office hours. He can also meet in person if you prefer. You will be working closely with one of the TAs on your paper for this course.

Assignments and Grades

The class meets in Locy Hall 214 from 9:30 to 10:50 on Mondays and Wednesdays. Students are expected to attend all classes, to complete all readings in advance, and to actively participate by occasionally asking a question or making a comment.

The final grade will be calculated as follows: (1) midterm exam, 30 percent; (2) final exam, 30 percent; (3) research paper, 30 percent; (4) attendance and participation, 10 percent. The two exams will be composed of short essay questions.

The midterm exam will be held during class time on October 25. The final exam will be held on Dec. 6 at 3pm in our regular classroom. Students who miss an exam or fail to turn in an exam (without excuse) will receive a failing grade for the course.

The paper assignment will be handed out on Wed, September 27 in class. It will be due on Monday, Dec. 4 at 12noon (you are welcome to turn it in earlier). The paper will involve independent research in which you write an essay of around 3,500 words about development in a country of your choice selected from a list provided with the assignment. Students who fail to turn in a paper will receive a failing grade for the course. You must work alone on your paper; failure to comply will lead to failure in the course and a report of an academic integrity violation. Late papers will be penalized with a reduction of 1/3 of a grade per day late. No exceptions.

The attendance and participation grade will be calculated as follows: Grade of A: Student misses no more than three classes and asks a question in at least 8 classes. Grade of B: Student misses no more than five classes and asks a question in at least 4 classes. Grade of C: Student misses no more than eight classes. Grade of F: Student misses more than eight classes. Any student who misses 10 or more classes will receive a failing grade for the whole course.

Learning Objectives

At the end of this course, students should have developed the following skills:

- An understanding of the core concepts used in the field of development;
- An understanding of several theories of development;
- An ability to discuss the causes of major development outcomes across time and space; and
- An ability to carry out case study analyses of development in particular countries.

Readings

This course uses one assigned book: Yuval Noah Harari, Sapiens: A Brief History of Humankind (New York: Harper, 2015). Please feel free to buy the book online; a used copy is fine. The other readings are available in a course packet, which can be purchased at Norris Bookstore starting on Wed, Sept. 20. You must buy the course packet.

Course Policies

Students are expected to attend class meetings and to complete all assignments. The only exception will be if a student has written documentation of a legitimate circumstance preventing completion of an assignment. This documentation must be provided in a timely fashion (i.e., one week). Legitimate circumstances are religious holidays, illnesses verified with a medical authority's note, serious family emergencies verified in writing, jury duty, military service, and participation in formal group activities sponsored by the University.

This course fully supports the Accessible NU program (accessiblenu@northwestern.edu; 847-467-5530) for students with disabilities of various kinds. Please give the professor advance notice in order to schedule proctoring for the exams. If you have questions, please do not hesitate to contact the professor. Students can find useful resources for safety and security, academic support, and mental and physical health and well-being at the NUhelp website and app.

This course is committed to diversity and equity; our differences as individuals make us stronger as a group. All of us belong here, and all of us have something special to contribute. We shall respect individual backgrounds, personal identities, intellectual approaches, and differences in our political convictions. We shall learn from each other precisely because we have distinctive traits and views that make us unique individuals.
